

Night owls only

Sydney's new nighttime "mayor" wants us to get out after hours and enjoy ourselves, but his proposal is really directed at the few who want their day to begin after dark ("Sydney's night mayor: 'My job is to get people out of the house and having fun. And often' " smh.com.au, December 9). He should remember that the majority of people use that time to switch off, wind down, relax and sleep. His jumpy proposals look interesting at first read but quickly become cliches and a mish-mash of ideas covering Harris Park to Broadway to the CBD. He probably shouldn't have had that 3am coffee. Maybe the "mayor" should just invest in a comfy new sofa. Carole Ferrier, Rushcutters Bay
